New Hampton

A New Hampshire School for Boys

NEW HAMPTON, N. H.

New Hampton Comes Into Its Own

A new regime begins next September at New Hampton Literary Institution. The trustees announce an entire reorganization of this time-honored institution.

Under a new principal, the school will be restored to its old position as one of the leading preparatory schools of New England. Instead of a co-educational institution, it will be a college preparatory school for boys.

Frederick Smith, an old New Hampton boy, has been appointed director and principal. Mr. Smith brings to New Hampton a wealth of educational experience. He received a Bachelor of Arts from Bates College, a Master of Arts from Harvard, and has taken further studies in educational administration at Harvard toward the degree of Doctor of Education.

What could be more fitting in this day of educational progress than to have a graduate of New Hampton at the helm of this famous old New England school? The institution will not only be reorganized, but will be thoroughly modernized, and will be known as New Hampton, a New Hampshire School for Boys.

The New Principal and Director

The new director of New Hampton has had a wide educational experience. He was head of the English Department, Connellsville, Pennsylvania, submaster of the high school, Attleboro, Massachusetts, principal of the Oliver Ames High School, North Easton, Massachusetts, and Superintendent of the American School Foundation, Mexico City, Mexico.

An Advance Step

Under this new principal, New Hampton takes its place as a distinctive college preparatory school for boys. The leading educators of New England are glad to see steps taken to put the school in its proper place of prominence in the educational field. The complete reorganization is a forward step for New Hampton.

Of particular interest is the new course in business methods for advanced students. This course is designed to help young men to prepare for executive positions in the business world. It is a radical departure from the ordinary business school—it differs both in work and in purpose. Students are instructed in the laws, customs and forms of business; in habits of neatness, accuracy, and thoroughness of work; and in practical business problems. It is an excellent course for the boy who intends to enter his father's business.

Delightful Location

Situated in Pemigewasset Valley—the gateway to the Presidential Range, surrounded by the beautiful New Hampshire hills, New Hampton is only four hours from Boston. The village of New Hampton is essentially a school village. There is no industry to disturb its peace and quiet, and the cultural and refining influence of a home life make it an ideal spot for a boarding school.

New Hampton has a fine equipment of six modern buildings, which, together with a campus and recreation field, occupy about twenty acres of land. A water system fed from clear mountain springs, and an up-to-date lighting and power system, help to place the school on the highest plane of efficiency for meeting the requirements of healthful living.

To Patrons and Friends of New Hampton

This new directorship means efficient education and thorough college preparation under sound and safe management. It means that, at a moderate cost, boys may prepare for college and for life at a modern school with a background of sound New England traditions, and live a normal, healthy life in the country.

Nothing is more satisfactory than to see the school that has always held your interest successfully expand to meet the incessant and ever-present demands of progress.

To the Many Friends of the New Executive

The new principal and director has a host of school friends throughout the country, especially in New England, who are eager to see the reorganized school advance toward an important position in the field of secondary education. He will be glad to receive their suggestions and the names of prospective students.

To Alumni of New Hampton Literary Institution

The alumni are enthusiastic about this new management, and are already asking,—“What can we do to help?”

Former women students of New Hampton realize that this reorganization as a school for boys is in the line of educational progress, and their loyalty to New Hampton Literary Institution is unchanged.

“A school is known by the alumni it keeps.” Parents want to send their boys to a school that is recommended by its alumni.

The plans of the new administration merit your support. The new principal wishes your suggestions and your help. Hundreds of boys need just the kind of education that is given here among the New Hampshire hills.

The new principal will be glad to have you send him the names of any boys that need the kind of education New Hampton offers.

A WELL COACHED TEAM
